INTRODUCTION

Brothers Robert Ng Chee Siong and Philip Ng Chee Tat control Far East Organization (FEO), Singapore's largest property developer, and Sino Group, a major developer in Hong Kong. They inherited the business from their father Ng Teng Fong, who founded FEO in 1960 and Sino Group a decade later. Ng Teng Fong, who died in 2010, immigrated to Singapore from China's Fujian province in the 1930s.

Robert Ng, the eldest son of Ng Teng Fong, is based in Hong Kong and chairs Sino Group. The group has three Hong Kong-listed entities: developers Sino Land and Tsim Sha Tsui Properties Limited, and hospitality-focused Sino Hotels (Holdings). Second son Philip Ng is based in Singapore. He is the CEO of FEO, which is Singapore's largest property developer after the government, according to its website. FEO has three Singapore-listed entities: developer Far East Orchard Limited, Far East Hospitality Trust and food, beverage and property company Yeo Hiap Seng (Singapore).

As of 2014, FEO and Sino Group had a combined turnover of USD 5.5bn, and assets valued at over USD 45bn, according to the group website. Forbes estimates Robert and Philip Ng's total net worth as of 2014 at USD 12.4bn, making the family Singapore's richest.

Family

Ng Teng Fong died in 2010 at the age of 82 and was survived by wife Tan Kim Choo, his two sons, five daughters, 22 grandchildren and one great-grandson, according to an Asiaone article citing his published obituary.

Apart from Robert and Philip, family members actively involved in the business include three of Ng Teng Fong's daughters. Ng Siok Keow is an executive director at FEO and non-executive director of Far East Orchard, while Ng Siok Giok and Dorothy Chan are executive directors at FEO.

Robert Ng has five children: Daryl Ng Win Kong, Nikki Ng Mien Hua, Jeanne Ng Mien Yi, Christine Ng Mien Yin and David Ng Win Loong. Eldest son Daryl is an executive director of Sino Land, Tsim Sha Tsui Properties and Sino Hotels (Holdings), while daughter Nikki is general manager at Sino Group, according to press reports. David is executive assistant to the chairman of Sino Group. He is director in the family's Panama-incorporated private entity Murdoch Investments Inc, according to database website Webb-site Who's Who.

Robert Ng is a former non-executive director of HK-listed SCMP Group, according to HKEX disclosures. SCMP Group is part of Kerry Group, which is controlled by the family of Robert Kuok. He is also a member of pro-Beijing think-tank One Country Two Systems Research Institute, according to the institute's website.

There is little public information available about the family of Philip Ng, who is married to Vy-vyen and has six children. He has been quoted frequently on his Christian faith, and often references Jesus in FEO's corporate publication, Landmarks. At a Christian Eagles Leadership Conference held in July 2007, he said that the decision-making process in FEO became more democratic and slower-paced after he became a Christian. He said that Christianity led him to stop working on Sundays, and to give employees a day of rest on Sunday in accordance with scripture. A 2012 Wesley Methodist Church publication reported that Philip Ng revealed in a speaking engagement that his father Ng Teng Fong converted to Christianity before he died, and that his mother and brother converted at the same time. FEO started an in-house chaplaincy program in January 2013 to help staff with spiritual, emotional and practical concerns, according to Landmarks.

Background

Ng Teng Fong was born in 1928 in Putian, Fujian province, and moved to Singapore with his family when he was six, according to Landmarks. His parents established a soy sauce factory and grocery business, which as the eldest of 11 children he was expected to take over. However, starting in the 1950s he focused on his own business, according to an article in Singapore Infopedia, an electronic historical encyclopedia maintained by the country's National Library. Early in his business career he encountered financial difficulties that led him to give up one of his eight children, the article states. Little published detail is available regarding his early business, but according to Singapore Infopedia he established FEO in 1960 with help from Singapore-based billionaire Eliyathamby. A search of media reports and online records did not reveal any additional information on Eliyathamby or his business. However, online articles citing the book "Indian Pioneers of Singapore" refer to Eliyathamby as a cousin of Ananda Krishnan, who according to Forbes is the second-richest person in Malaysia.

FEO's first project was a residential development in 1962, and it expanded into hospitality in 1969 by acquiring a stake in Singapore Hilton Hotel. It ventured into retail and commercial property in 1974, when it developed Far East Shopping Centre. FEO today has 185 private companies, along with its three listed entities. It has been involved in more than 750 residential, hospitality, retail, commercial and industrial developments in Singapore, according to its website. It owns two medical facilities: Singapore

Novena Medical Centre and Novena Specialist Centre. Ng Teng Fong was known as the "King of Orchard Road", as FEO led the development of the area with nine major shopping malls and stakes in numerous hotels, according to Landmarks.

In 1970, Ng Teng Fong expanded into Hong Kong with the establishment of Sino Group. Tsim Sha Tsui Properties was listed in 1972, followed by Sino Land Company in 1981 and Sino Hotels (Holdings) in 1994. The group played a leading role in the development of the Tsim Sha Tsui East area of Kowloon, with the construction of Tsim Sha Tsui Centre in 1980, according to press reports. Ng Teng Fong, who had strong ties with the Hong Kong government, was the only Singaporean businessperson invited to the signing of the Sino-British Joint Declaration in 1984 on the handover to China, according to Landmarks. Sino Land has been a constituent stock of the Hang Seng Index since 1995.

Yeo Hiap Seng

One of Ng Teng Fong's few deals outside the property industry was a bid in 1995 to take majority control of Yeo Hiap Seng (YHS), a well-known Singapore-listed food and beverage company founded and managed by the Yeo family. Eyeing property assets held by YHS, Ng Teng Fong began buying YHS shares on the open market in the early 1990s as a family feud emerged at YHS amid investment losses, according to press reports. In 1994, YHS chairman and chief executive Alan Yeo supported a bid by Wing Tai Holdings to acquire up to 40% of the company, but family members led by his nephew Charles Yeo blocked the bid. Alan Yeo then successfully petitioned the High Court of Singapore to dissolve the family's collective 38.5% stake, according to Singapore Infopedia. After a battle for control of Yeo Hiap Seng which also drew in Indonesia's Salim Group, Haw Par Brothers International, and a consortium including Malaysian tycoon Quek Leng Chan's Sembawang Corp, Ng Teng Fong succeeded in acquiring a majority stake.

Financial Crisis

FEO's rapid growth had raised frequent concerns about its financing capabilities from the early days of its expansion, according to Singapore Infopedia. FEO was reported to have faced liquidity problems in the 1960s as it undertook successive major projects, and was saved by a credit line by the Moscow Narodny Bank. In the 1980s, it fought a downturn in the Singapore market by cutting prices to attract buyers, according to press reports.

When the Asian financial crisis hit in 1997, FEO countered rumors of debt defaults by disclosing financial figures, according to Singapore Infopedia. The privately held developer announced it had recorded SGD 2.5bn in sales in 1997, and had a debt-to-asset ratio of 0.47x. FEO demonstrated that it had access to credit in August 1998 when it completed Singapore's first mortgage-backed bond issue, a Citibank-led SGD 162m deal, according to Singapore Infopedia. In 1999, the family revealed that its companies had a combined SGD 8.2bn in sales. In 2000, FEO bought a site at Clarke Quay in Singapore for SGD 341m, while Sino Group undertook a costly renovation of the Fullerton Hotel.

HK Futures Exchange Scandal

Robert Ng was involved in trades that led to the collapse of Hong Kong's futures exchange and a four-day trading halt on the Hong Kong Stock Exchange in October 1987, according to press reports. Robert Ng lost roughly HKD 1bn through speculative investments on the Hong Kong Futures Exchange, according to reports. He initially challenged the legality of stock index future contracts in a bid to avoid payment, but eventually agreed to repay HKD 750m, without interest, over the course of eight years, according to the Straits Times. An investigation by the Commercial Crime Bureau of the Royal Hong Kong Police reportedly revealed that Ng avoided required margin calls after colluding with one of his brokers, but the Hong Kong government chose not to prosecute due to fears of market fallout, and worked out a deal to bail out the exchange. At the 1991 corruption trial of former Commercial Crime Bureau senior superintendent Philip Layton, it was disclosed that a plan to arrest a prominent businessman involved in a HKD 1bn loss had been dropped abruptly, the Business Times reported in 1991. Robert Ng's total personal investment losses during the 1987 crash reportedly totaled about USD 250m.

Australian Expansion

Robert and Philip Ng have recently made significant acquisitions in Australia. In 2013, they acquired the Clocktower Square mixed-use development in Sydney for USD 64m million, and in 2014 bought Harbour Town Center in Perth for USD 183m through Singapore-listed Far East Hospitality Trust, according to corporate disclosures. FEO plans to develop a 13.7 hectare site in Melbourne into an integrated residential area, while Singapore-listed subsidiary Far East Orchard has a hospitality joint venture with Australia-based Toga Group. In 2013, Robert and Philip Ng bought Yamba, 7,463-sq-m heritage property on Scotland Island in New South Wales, for USD 6.2m.
